

JOURNAL OF THE INTERNATIONAL AIDS SOCIETY: CALL FOR PAPERS ON HIV AND COVID-19

Beginning in December 2019, the world experienced an outbreak of coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19), caused by the severe acute respiratory syndrome coronavirus 2 (SARS-CoV-2). Within a few months, COVID-19 rapidly disseminated worldwide and the World Health Organization characterized the coronavirus outbreak as a pandemic on 11 March 2020.

There is little information about how people living with, and at high risk for, HIV could be affected by SARS-CoV-2. The Journal of the International AIDS Society is encouraging manuscript submissions focusing on HIV and SARS-CoV-2. All article categories will be considered: Research, Short report, Review, Debate, Commentary, and Viewpoint.

Submissions may include or refer to research conducted in any setting (for example, geographic location, patient population, health sector) and focusing on, but not limited to, the following topics:

- Clinical course and risk factors for mortality of people living with HIV of all ages co-infected with SARS-CoV-2
- Impact of the COVID-19 epidemic on HIV risk-taking behaviors
- Impact of COVID-19 on people co-infected with HIV and TB or HCV
- Impact of COVID-19 on people living with HIV and various co-morbidities
- Pre-clinical development and clinical trials of therapeutic agents for COVID-19
- Models of the response to the HIV epidemic that inform the response to the COVID-19 epidemic
- Impact of COVID-19 on the HIV Care Continuum
- Perspectives or lessons learnt from the HIV response for COVID-19

Editorial decisions regarding publication in JIAS will be based on the outcome of a rigorous peer review process. All JIAS articles are fully open access and immediately freely available to read, download and share after online publication. Please read the Author Guidelines for more information:

<https://onlinelibrary.wiley.com/page/journal/17582652/homepage/forauthors.html>

Manuscripts should be submitted to <https://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/jias>. Should you want to enquire about the suitability of a manuscript for consideration, please email editorial@jiasociety.org with the subject line “HIV and SARS-CoV-2 JIAS.”